Hannah Green And Her Unfeasibly

The titular Hannah Green is a young girl dealing with the break up of her parents' marriage. Her mother has left her father for a work colleague, and has moved from the West Coast of the USA to London. The marriage break up is the unfeasibly mundane part of Hannah's life. So common a set of experiences and so frequent.

Hannah Green actually thinks her story is more mundane than most. But she's about to discover that the shadows in her life have been hiding a world where nothing is as it seems: that there's an ancient and secret machine that converts evil deeds into energy, that some mushrooms can talk — and that her grandfather has been friends with the Devil for over a hundred and fifty years, and now they need her help.

Hannah Green and Her Unfeasibly Mundane Existence ...

Hannah Green is ordinary. Her life — at least her usual life — is indeed unfeasibly mundane. But this girl is capable of extraordinary things. Throughout the book, we see Hannah experiencing conflicts and emotions that are very normal for an eleven-year-old and yet rarely written about with such realistic focus.

A couple of times Hannah has thought she's seen Vaneclaw, too, though it's possible it was just some other unfeasibly large mushroom. Wearing a cape. Life goes on. Always. We make it, together. Hannah does, through learning to be herself.

Hannah Green and Her Unfeasibly Mundane Existence(Page 30 ...

What I take away from Hannah Green and Her Unfeasibly Mundane Existence are passages that are written with simple beauty, a protagonist who is charming, and a story much larger than we can grasp in one take. Much like our younger protagonist, we have to read between the lines, put the words, the history, together.

Hannah felt a shiver at the base of her skull, as though something small and insectlike with sharp little feet had run into her ear and tunnelled into the back of her brain. Nothing happened for a moment. Then all three pieces of doorframe fell off. Granddad grasped the handle with one hand and supported the door with the other.
